

How can I help my child learn to read?

There are lots of ways to raise a reader beyond just reading a book together. Join PBS KIDS in Raising Readers. Here's an easy tip that will show you that public television helps kids read too:

Can children really learn from watching TV? Yes, they can with literacy programming.

Between the Lions

stars a family of lions who run a magical library where characters pop out of books, vowels sing and words take on a life of their own.

Sesame Street helps children learn and grow in a constantly changing, continually challenging environment.

SUPER WHY! is an animated series which introduces a group of super-heroes who help kids learn to read through interactive fairytale adventures!

Providing constant opportunity for word play, WordWorld empowers children as early readers by making the important connections between letters, sounds, words and meaning that are necessary for reading. So, go to pbskids.org/read to join PBS KIDS in Raising Readers!
